PRAIRIE DOGS HIS HELPERS.

Nebraska Farmer to Test Law Designed to Rid Him of His Workmen.

There is great excitement and indignation on the head waters of the Minneaduzza creek, in Cherry county, Neb., over the action of Senator Brown of this district in securing the passage of a bill by the last legislature designed to exterminate one of the industries of northwest Nebraska, says the Omaha Bee.

It will be remembered that Senator Brown secured the passage of an act to exterminate the prairie dog in Nebraska. When they were not exterminated by the owner of the land on which they had their habitat, then it was made the duty of the road overseer to destroy them and charge the expense of same against the land.

Louis Grosmentir, who was one of the earliest settlers on the Minneaduzza creek, near Georgia, Neb., has for a number of years been training the inhabitants of a small prairie dog town upon his farm. As is well known, the most profitable crop that can be grown in this region is alfalfa. For the greatest success in growing alfalfa two things are necessary. First, that the roots of the alfalfa plant shall be infected with a certain fungus, and, second, that the roots shall be able to pierce the soil and reach the water beneath. Mr. Grosmentir made the important discovery a few years ago that this fungus is propagated by the prairie dog and carried by it in digging its burrows through the earth so as to prepare the ground for alfalfa culture. After four years of diligent application he has perfected his system so that his dogs not only infect the soil with fungus, but break through the hardpan in numberless places so as to afford easy access to the alfalfa roots to the all important water beneath.

One of the most beautiful sights ever witnessed in the redemption of the semiarid west is to behold Mr. Grosmentir's town of prairie dogs at work preparing a field for alfalfa culture.

It has just been made known that under the statute passed by the last legislature of Nebraska these beautiful and industrious redeemers of the region are condemned to death. Mr. Grosmentir is taking steps to test the law and for that purpose will consult the most eminent counsel in the state.

Heating Stoves.

When rooms are heated by stoves economy lies in never letting the fire go down in cold weather, as it takes more heat to warm the rooms when the walls are chilled than it does to keep them so for days.

Coduction.

The education of women and coduction are not such new things as most persons believe. In Helene Lange's "Handbuch der Frauenbewegung" attention is called to the fact that some of the monastery schools for girls is the tenth and eleventh centuries were as good as the schools for boys, and boys were sent to them.

Two Hundred Houses

Are painted each day with Colonial Paint. This may seem large to you, but it is a fact. There is, of course, a reason for this, and it is simple, all summed up in these words: No adulteration.

The Colonial Paint is made of just what you would mix by hand, pure Lead and Oil, with a small proportion of Zinc. The only advantage we have is the grinding together of these pigments to the last degree of fineness, thereby producing uniformity that cannot be obtained in any other way.
